

MOTHERWELL COLLEGE VOTED THE IMI AWARDS APPROVED TRAINING CENTRE OF THE YEAR 2010

Motherwell College, a member of The Motor Industry Skills Consortium, has been voted the IMI Awards Approved Training Centre of the Year 2010.

The decision was announced at the IMI Awards' annual achievers event held at Fanshaws in Hertfordshire on 10th June.

Two of the other three finalists, Bridgwater College and Coleg Glan Hafren, are also Motor Industry Skills Consortium members making it a great day for the consortium.

The award was made in recognition of the college's overall performance, range of qualifications offered to its candidates and support provided to local and regional businesses, all of which represents a premier offering in the IMI Awards approved centre network.

Motherwell College has made significant investment over the last twelve months having opened their £70 million facilities last year, which house superbly equipped classrooms and workshops in a dedicated automotive centre.

HRH Prince Michael of Kent presenting the award to Robert McMillan and Ian McLintock of Motherwell College

Commenting on the award, Andy Griffin, Motor Industry Skills Consortium Business Development Manager, said "Congratulations to Robert and the team at Motherwell, the award is richly deserved. We have all seen the hard work they have put in to achieve the high standards they deliver and for them to be challenged in the final by two other consortium centres is a fantastic reflection of the quality of training offered by our member colleges".